

Firm Bids Dwight Fettig a Fond Farewell

Firm name to revert to original founders

Washington, DC (December 3, 2010) – Porterfield, Lowenthal & Fettig, LLC, today announced that it has changed its name back to Porterfield & Lowenthal, LLC, therein reflecting the original founders.

Dwight Fettig is departing the firm to return to public service, accepting a job with U.S. Senator Tim Johnson, (D-SD). Fettig has known Senator Johnson for 22 years, and their friendship and respect for each other explain why Senator Johnson has asked Dwight to return to the Senate.

“Dwight is making a huge sacrifice of himself and his family. We respect his decision to once again choose the life of public service. Such work is tough and demanding, resulting in both family and financial sacrifice,” said Lendell Porterfield, the firm’s CEO. “He should be congratulated.”

“Both Senator Johnson and our Firm have always adhered to the highest standards of ethical conduct. To that end, it is important to reaffirm our commitment not only to the rules of the Senate regarding conflicts of interest but also to the spirit of the Senate Ethics rules. We know Dwight will follow scrupulously the Senate ethics requirements that all citizens who come before the Senate will be treated with respect and impartiality, affording no special treatment due to a prior business relationship,” said Andrew Lowenthal, the firm’s President.

Everyone at Porterfield & Lowenthal, LLC wishes Dwight, his family and Senator Johnson the best.
